CI-4

MATTER IN TENSION

A monumental table-sculpture in anodized aluminium and natural stone, where geological mass meets engineered lightness.

C1-4

C1-4 is conceived as a dialogue between two opposing states of matter. A monolithic volume of natural stone forms the architectural core - dense, permanent and shaped by geological time.

Around it, a continuous anodized-aluminium structure extends with an entirely different character: light, precise and seemingly drawn by movement. The surface stretches beyond the stone, folds towards the floor and separates into sculptural planes.

“Stone anchors the form. Aluminium sets it in motion.”

ARCHITECTURAL PROFILE

A restrained horizontal line transforms into a sequence of flowing aluminium planes.

THE MATERIAL DIALOGUE

Matter in Tension

Geological mass is placed against engineered lightness. The stone anchors the composition; the anodized aluminium appears to escape it. From every viewpoint, C1-4 reveals a different relationship between surface, mass and negative space.
